Yoga has become extremely popular around the world. There are thousands of new persons being attracted every year to practice Yoga in the USA, Europe and in other countries. However, many of them see Yoga as a kind of physical exercise.

This exhibition conveys the true meaning of Yoga.

A few thousand years ago, we do not know exactly when, intellectuals in India realized that material aims and ambitions do not really lead to true happiness or even to good health. They began to map the world inside us, to explore it and to find the ways of truly creating lasting joy. It is the science of the mind, of life and of the inner world, which is expressed in yoga. Yoga, in its many different manifestations, is the path towards final knowledge and ultimate joy.

Representations of Yoga are to be found in the Indus Valley seals of 5,000 years ago. The Upanishads, formulated by the 8th / 9th century BCE, put forward the concepts of Yoga. Ancient Indian philosophy is deeply related to Yoga. The best answer to the problems of the world today, appears to be this ancient answer from the Indian traditions.

Yoga has been found by leading scientists and doctors around the world to be extremely beneficial for all people. Yoga is the most profound and deep study of the human mind ever conducted. There is much the entire world can benefit from Yoga. In an age where considerable medical problems and psychological disorders are created by the pressures of the commercialized world, a workable answer appears to be Yoga.

Yoga may be the answer to the problems of the degeneration of physical and mental health, which the world is facing today.

An answer which leads to warmth, love and morality in all our lives. It also holds the promise of self-knowledge and emancipation.
